

What Does the Land Want?

Imagining and Building Together Workshop Series: an opportunity to co-create an inclusive and caring vision for a piece of land in central Birmingham.

- Free to attend
- Children's Provision Available
- No Previous Experience Needed

Sundays 1:00-4:30PM | 31 May, 28 June, 27 Sep, 25 Oct

The Unitarian New Meeting House, 31 Ryland St, B16 8BL, Birmingham

This workshop series is part of “To Build is to Become”, one of the winners of the RIBA Research Fund 2025 and is delivered in collaboration with Brum Unitarians, an inclusive community of atheists, theists, and all in between.

What Does the Land Want?

Sundays | 1:00 PM – 4:30 PM

31 May – Workshop 1: Listening to the Land

Exploring the site, its histories, memories, materials, and more-than-human voices. Understanding what already exists and what the land might be asking for.

28 June – Workshop 2: Imagining Together

Collective dreaming and co-designing of possibilities. Exploring what the community needs, what the place can become, and shaping a shared vision.

27 September – Workshop 3: Building Together

Hands-on making using natural and reused materials. Learning simple building skills and creating a living structure with the land.

25 October – Workshop 4: Becoming Together

Reflecting on what has changed in us, in our relationships, and in the place itself. Thinking about care, continuity, and future possibilities.

What Does the Land Want?

Unlike many design projects, where decisions are made elsewhere, these workshops create a space where everyone's voice matters. Together, we will listen to the land, to each other, and to the stories, materials, and living beings that shape the selected piece of land within the Unitarian New Meeting House site.

Through this workshop, we will explore the possibility of building bridges between communities and the land. "What Does the Land Want" is an opportunity to develop an open, inclusive, and caring way of shaping the places we live in.
